Mobiquity Technologies Expands Media Supply and Provides Innovative New Media Opportunities for Programmatic Advertisers

NEW YORK, March 19, 2019 (PR NEWSWIRE) -- Mobiquity Technologies, Inc. (OTCQB: MOBQ), a company providing mobile first, next generation programmatic advertising capabilities is announcing the addition of three new premium advertising supply partners to the Advangelists platform across display, video, and unique AR/VR technologies.

New supply partners include Admix, Rubicon Project and Column6. Admix develops unique AR (augmented reality) and VR (virtual reality) advertising opportunities. Rubicon Project is a leading global ad supplier with over 50% of US ComScore 100 publishers. Column6 provides direct access to premium video opportunities in the US and Latin America. Together these three supply partners significantly expand the reach of advertiser campaigns and provide highly unique new media opportunities for advertisers seeking to distance their brands from the competition.

"While CTV and video are the fastest growing and most requested element of the Advangelists platform, we are really excited to be providing new media opportunities of augmented and virtual reality for advertisers," said Dean Julia, CEO of Mobiquity Technologies. "As our roster of advertisers and agencies continues to grow, it is important for us to provide both the scale and reach of premium publishers, simultaneously offering opportunities for marketers to test and learn from innovative new formats of advertising. We believe these new partners meet the diverse demands of our advertisers."
